

PATENTED FLORIBUNDAS

Floribunda Roses produce somewhat smaller blooms than Hybrid Teas. Their blooms grow in heavy bouquet-like clusters on short stems. The plants are very hardy and Floribundas are among the easiest of all Roses to grow. They do well in colder climates where the growing season is relatively short.

Because the plants are bushy and their blooms are relatively continuous, Floribunda Roses are especially effective in mass plantings. They will produce an abundance of fresh colorful blooms from early spring to late frost.

These patented varieties have been developed after years of painstaking hybridizing. They have been registered with the United States Patent Office and have been accepted as having true color and form.

The varieties marked with an asterisk (*) are All-America Rose Selections.

TREE ROSES

P-D Tree Roses are grown by a method that takes three years before the plants are ready for shipment. Unlike other varieties, Tree Roses branch out from a single cane or trunk. They grow to a height of 5 feet or more, depending on their type, climatic conditions and care. The bushy top of the plant has a multitude of colorful blooms similar in shape and size to that of Hybrid Tea Roses.

Tree Roses are generally arranged in the landscape design as individual plantings. They are particularly effective in formal plantings and afford a brilliant cluster of color to contrast with formal tree and shrub plantings.

OREGON GROWN ROSES . . . The Finest Anywhere

Budded to a P-D super strain of multiflora root stock and grown under exacting care in the P-D rose fields at Scappoose, Oregon.

The Rose is the favorite flower of all ages. It grows to hardy and perfect form in the lower Columbia River area of Oregon where pure air, fertile soil and a long growing season are ideal for Rose culture. As this hardy stock approaches maturity it continues to thrive when transplanted almost anywhere in the Northern Hemisphere. Supplied with deep rich soil, ample water and protection during freezing weather, an Oregon-grown rose will reward its owner with an abundance of beautiful blooms.

A super strain of multiflora root stock makes P-D field grown Roses more hardy. They produce sturdier and more beautiful bushes under any reasonable growing conditions.

ALL AMERICA WINNERS

These Roses have received the highest ratings among all the varieties tested in the official All-America Rose Selection gardens throughout the United States. They are outstanding for blooms of pure form and color, and foliage of good appearance. Budded to our own hardy multiflora root stock, they will thrive under any reasonable growing conditions.

Those marked with an asterisk (*) received an AARS sectional award the year of their introduction.

POPULAR PATENTED HYBRID TEAS

Hybrid Teas probably have greater popularity throughout the world than any other flowers. They are upright growing bushes which bear blooms sometimes as large as 6 inches across. Hybrid Tea Roses are the result of a cross between sturdy Hybrid Perpetual Roses and Chinese tea-scented Roses. The number of hybrid types and colors is virtually unlimited and modern Rose hybridization has become an exacting science. Through controlled hybridization the size, vigor, hardiness and resistance to disease have been improved as new colors and more perfect form are developed.

Hybrid Tea Roses may be planted in formal beds or in informal groupings. Their use depends largely on the effect desired by the individual gardener. Because of their long stems, the blooms make excellent cut flowers. The brilliant colors and purity of form are a great source of enjoyment.
